TIPS

HOW TO PICK THE RIGHT SWIMWEAR FOR YOUR BODY SHAPE

Yes, we have the tricks to help you flaunt what you have.

By Fashion Like Me
January 04, 2020

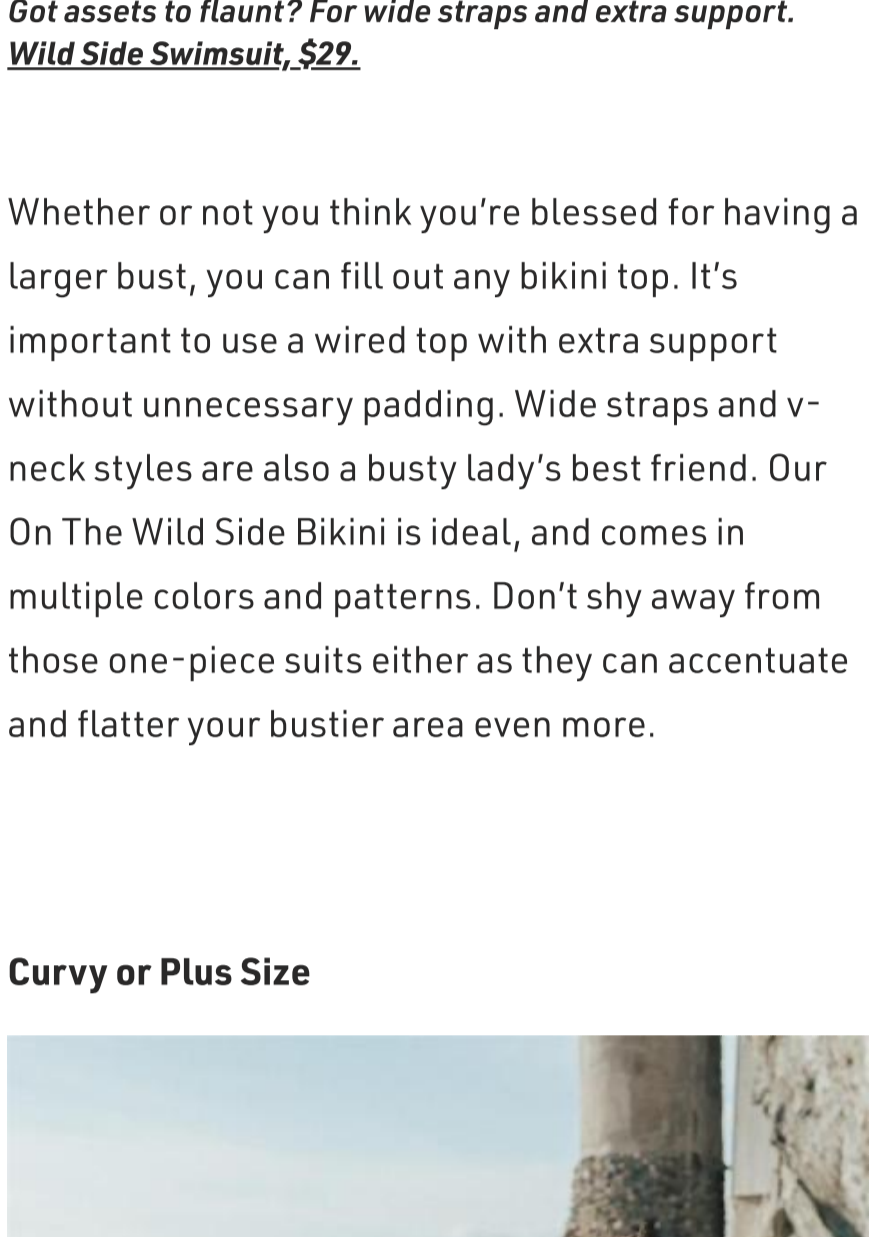

If you live somewhere the beach is warm year-round, or you're planning a winter vacation somewhere hot down south, knowing what swimwear will suit your body best can be a little frustrating. The truth is, very few women look good in everything (unless you're Jennifer Aniston).

We've all been blessed with bodies of all shapes and sizes - but we're all beautiful and can look flattering in a swimsuit if we can choose a style that complements our body shape perfectly.

Here are a few tips from the Fashion Like Me team on how to pick the right swimwear for your body shape:

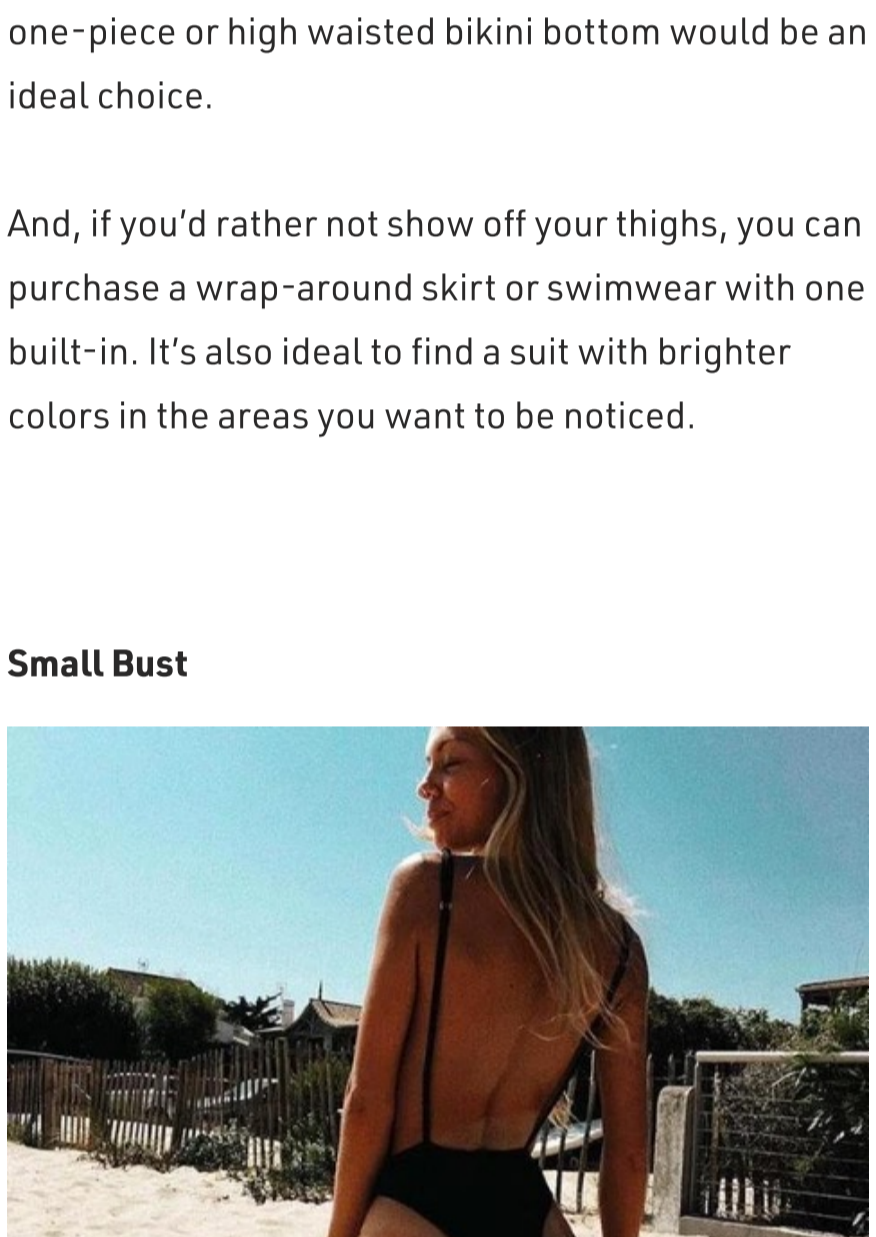

Large Bust

Got assets to flaunt? For wide straps and extra support. Wild Side Swimsuit, $29.

Whether or not you think you're blessed for having a larger bust, you can fill out any bikini top. It's important to use a wired top with extra support without unnecessary padding. Wide straps and v-neck styles are also a busty lady's best friend. Our On The Wild Side Bikini is ideal, and comes in multiple colors and patterns. Don't shy away from those one-piece suits either as they can accentuate and flatter your bustier area even more.

Curvy or Plus Size

Dress-style monokinis can work well for curvy or plus sized figures. Vintage monokini, $39.

If you've got all the curves in the right places, and maybe a few in areas you don't want to show off, a one-piece or high waisted bikini bottom would be an ideal choice.

And, if you'd rather not show off your thighs, you can purchase a wrap-around skirt or swimwear with one built-in. It's also ideal to find a suit with brighter colors in the areas you want to be noticed.

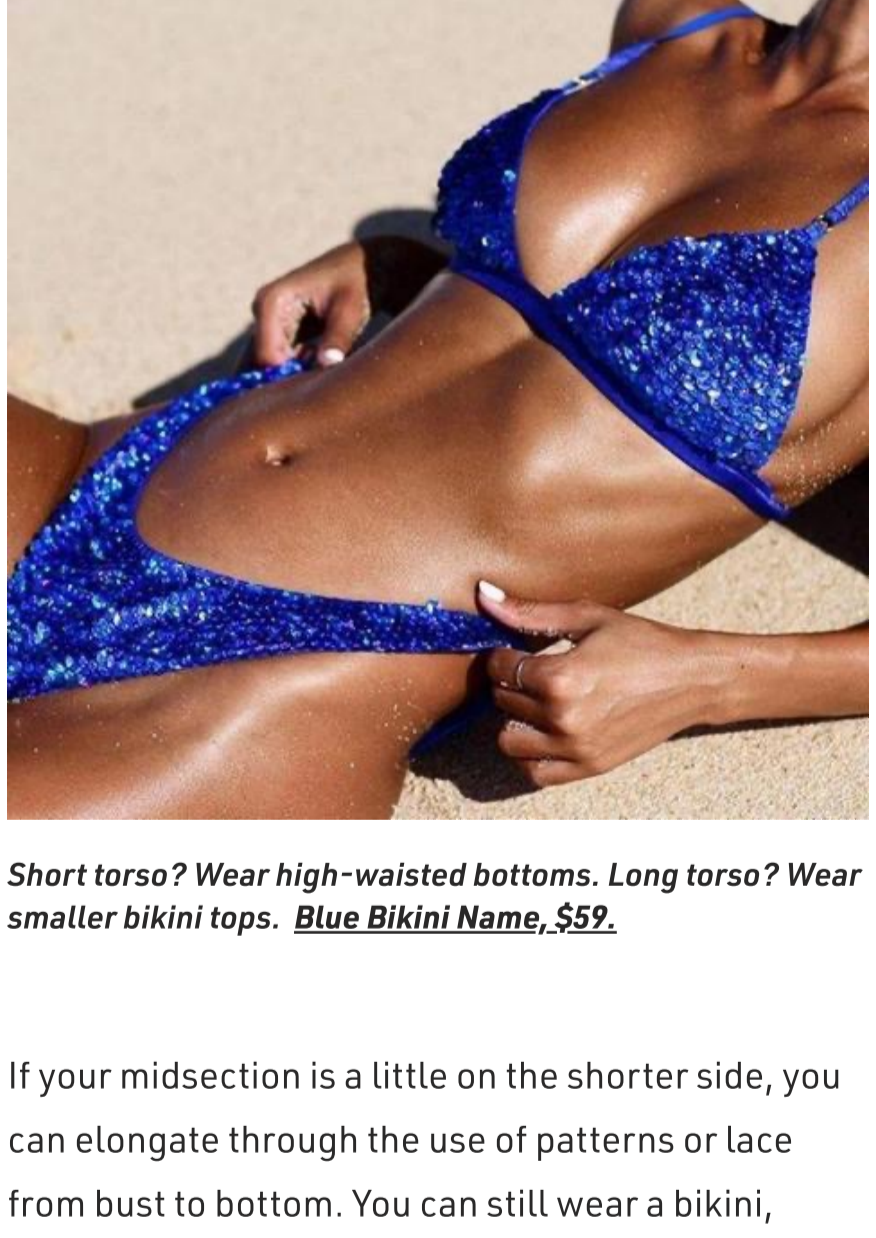

Small Bust

Provocative? Maybe. Killer ass? Definitely. Black Swimwear Name, was $59, now $39.

Solids and simple triangles bring less attention to your bust area. If you'd like to give the illusion of a larger bust, add a push-up or padding and horizontal lines, polka dots or ruffles. And flaunt what you do have! If you've got an ass that you can't wait to show off, focus on bikini bottoms or one piece that draws the attention there instead.

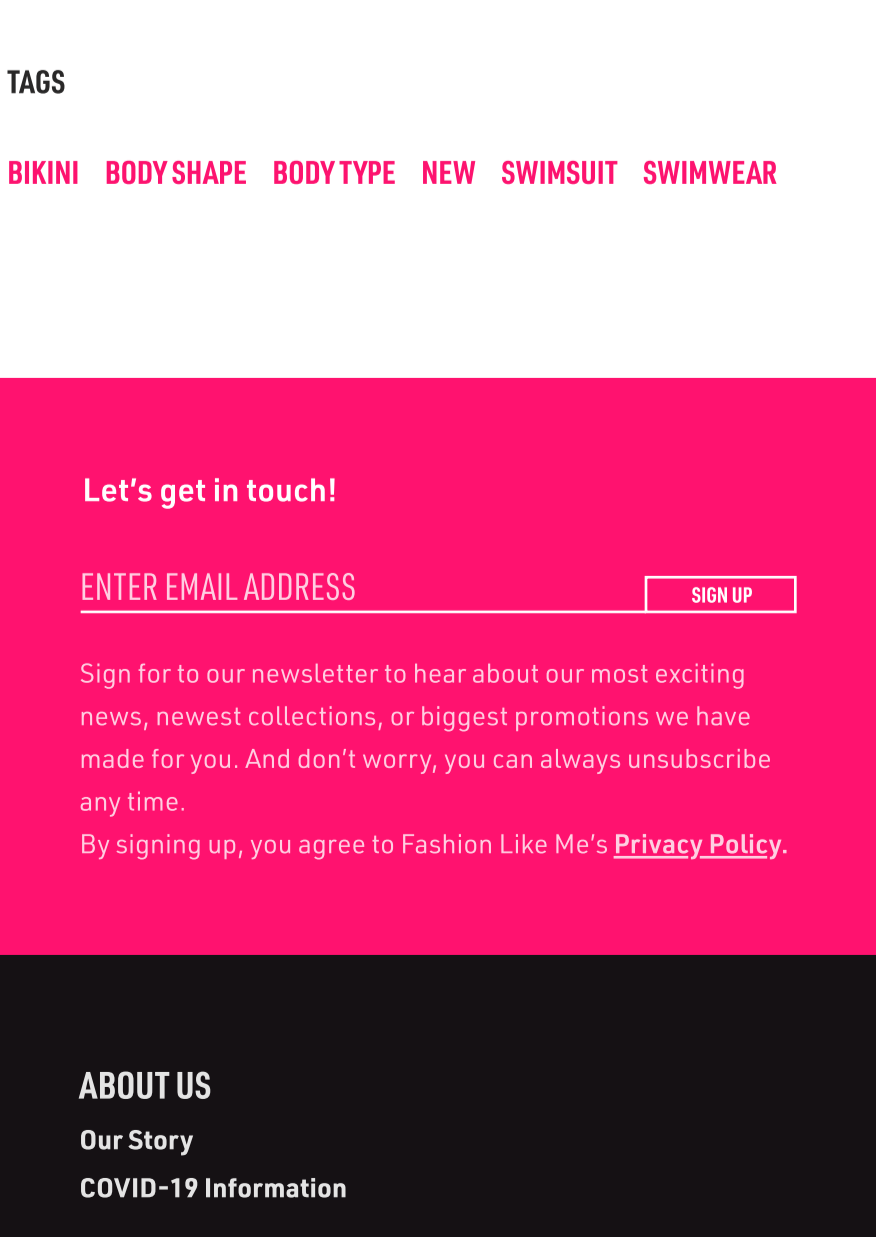

No Curves

Skirted monokini with loud prints can work wonders for ladies without curves. Vintage Polka Monokini, was $59, now $29.

There are bikinis and swimsuits that will fit your body and enhance your chest and bottom without going over the top. This is your time to get a one piece of ruffles, diamonds, or belts to give your body an extra push. A monokini with a little skirt will give the illusion that a rounder bottom (not that you need one) is hiding underneath.

Short/Long Torso

Short torso? Wear high-waisted bottoms. Long torso? Wear smaller bikini tops. Blue Bikini Name, $59.

If your midsection is a little on the shorter side, you can elongate through the use of patterns or lace from bust to bottom. You can still wear a bikini, however, choose high waisted bottoms or cut-outs like this Italian-style bikini. If your torso is longer, take advantage of smaller bikinis and tankini tops that will bring attention to other areas of your body. Try and stay clear from straight cut bottoms and opt for straps that rise over your hips.

Interested in viewing our swimwear collection to find the perfect piece to show off at the beach or your next vacation?
